

FESTIVAL EVENTS

HISTORY

Clay City Pottery, Incorporated, the oldest commercial pottery in Indiana, has been in operation since 1885. An English-Welsh potter, Beryl Griffith, chose the Clay City area because of the quality of clay. He founded an operation still owned by the Griffith family.

In keeping with the traditions of the pottery's original productions, the Clay City Pottery manufactures crocks made from the original molds. Clay City Pottery manufactures a complete line of functional stoneware, which has been featured in many country magazines and catalogs. These items are shipped and distributed throughout the United States.

Clay City Pottery also distributes a variety of bird baths and lawn and garden ware to the public.

Owner Justin Lewicki, invites you to stop by the plant and visit the large retail-wholesale store and tour the plant where the pottery is made.

The Pottery Festival Committee would like to welcome everyone to Clay City and hope your day is enjoyable.
